Department of chemistry of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign have been involved in C–H bond activation, aiming at developing new catalysts for synthesis. We have focused on the design, synthesis, and applications of complementary metal-organic frameworks with advantageous structure, properties, and potential applications. Our work is conducted in cooperation with other groups in the field of catalytic science and technology, with the goal of developing new and sustainable methods for chemical synthesis. We are also interested in the development of new computational tools for the design of catalytic systems. Our research is supported by grants from the National Science Foundation and the Department of Energy. Our publications can be found in reputable scientific journals.
